HANS SEBALD BEHAM.

The impression is limited to one hundred copies, of which this is No. 100.

CATALOGUE OF THE PRINTS AND ETCHINGS OF
HANS SEBALD BEHAM,
PAINTER, OF NUREMBERG, CITIZEN OF FRANK-FORT, 1500-1550.

LONDON:
MRS. NOSEDA, 109, STRAND.
1877.

Reverse copy of No. 100.

No. 268, reversed.

HANS SEBALD BEHAM
was born in 1500. His brother Bartholomew and he were pupils of Albert Durer, and, together with Albert Altdorfer, Henry Aldegraver, George Pencz, Jacob Bink, and Hans Brosamer, became known as the “Seven Little Masters.” The same subjects were used for design by each of them, and it is possible that those of them who were actually students in the employment of Durer had these and other subjects set to them by way of tasks. In 1518 we first find Hans Sebald Beham's monogram on an engraving, No. 1 in this Catalogue. A facsimile of it on wood forms our first illustration. It represents a young girl, her head leaning on one side, and is signed with the letters

1520
H.S.P. This monogram he continued to use until the year 1531, when a goblet, No. 93 in this catalogue, first bears the letters H.S.B. There are no engravings known dated in the years 1532, 1533, or 1534, but a picture now in the Louvre bears the last-mentioned date, and may have employed him in the interval to the exclusion of engraving. It represents four scenes in the life of David, and contains the artist's portrait and that of his patron, Albert, Cardinal Archbishop of ¹⁵⁴¹ Mentz, whose arms, in an undated ^{15B} and unsigned print, No. 277 in this list, of which an impression, perhaps unique, is in the Bibliothèque at Paris, may have been engraved, among other works, during those years. In 1544 he was a citizen of Frankfort, as appears by the inscription round a print of his arms, No. 136. In 1549 he dated three engravings, Nos. 168, 169, and 170, and, according to several authorities, he died in 1550.

Some doubts have been expressed as to his being the engraver both of those prints which bear the H.S.P. and those which have H.S.B., but, apart from the fact that the same change occurs in the signature of Barthel Beham, a comparison of his works, chronologically arranged, shows a gradual progress from his early to his later manner, and leaves no question as to his identity. His etchings are few in number, and for the most part inferior in execution (Nos. 23, 24, 27, 52, 60, 105, &c.). His wood-engravings are many in number, and are not here described, but several were reproduced by De Bry and others on copper, and some of them, bearing his initials, are occasionally included in lists of his prints. He seems to have worked chiefly for goldsmiths and for engravers on ivory. An inlaid box at South Kensington has ivory copies of Nos. 76, 143, and 194, in this list. He also seems to have made at least one carving in soap-stone—his own portrait, afterwards copied by Hollar. Another portrait exists in a drawing at the Albertine Museum, in Vienna, but very few drawings from his hand have been identified.

In the following list his dated works with the monogram H.S.P. are first given in chronological order. Next, those with the same signature which are undated, in the order in which they occur in Bartsch. His engravings with H.S.B. follow, also in the order of the years marked on them, and after them the list of undated works with the second monogram. Finally some doubtful or unsigned works, usually attributed to him, conclude the list.

The chief and latest authority for his life and that of Barthel Beham, is Rosenberg's volume, published at Leipzig, in 1872; it contains, besides the results of original research, full references to previous writers on the subject. The present list is the first, however, in which a chronological order is attempted—an order which might, perhaps, have been so far pursued as to include nearly all his works from a careful comparison of the style of each. At the end of the book will be found an index of the numbers in Bartsch, so as to render the catalogue more useful to collectors.

Where I have added B.M., Par., Cam., Ox., or L., I wish to signify that impressions of a rare print exist in one or other of these collections:—The British Museum, xii Hans Sebald Beham.

the Bibliothèque at Paris, the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge, the Douce Collection in the Taylor Buildings at Oxford, or my own collection.

This exquisite little piece has puzzled the authorities, most of whom confound it with No. 265. It is, however, a different print and from a different plate. The following points may be noticed:—In the present plate the date occurs in the earliest impressions; there is cross-hatching on the Jester's breast; the lines on the sleeper's face are drawn from left, above, to right, or as heralds say, "in bend dexter": the knees of the same figure are striped. For other differences, see under No. 265, of which it is very likely that this print is a repetition. There are many copies, and one of them in reverse is possibly by Beham. The original plate is, or was lately, in existence.

95. A WINGED FEMALE CHILD, holding in her left hand a helmet and crest, and leaning her right on a shield charged with three inescutcheons in a bordure: her left foot is on a globe, beside which is the monog. H. S. B., and date 1535. W. $2\frac{3}{16}$ in. H. $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. B. 258.

See No. 94, of which this plate has sometimes been described as the first state : this is a mistake, as is easily proved by the existence of worn-out impressions still wanting date. In this print the face of the sleeping man is shaded with lines "in bend sinister" : and his knees are not striped. It is on the whole superior to No. 94.

Above, right, is a dial, with hours, the hand pointing to 2: left, an hour glass. Below, right, a small shield, "on a bend, three estoiles": left, a skull. This piece is quite in Beham's manner: the paroquet resembles that in Nos. 168 and 175: the figures on the clock face are the same as those in many of his prints. W. $2\frac{1}{16}$ in. H. $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. Cam., L.
